

Families Building Community

You are invited to join us for a family program at the Queens Museum of Art designed exclusively for you:

“The Museum Explorers Club”

Register for Saturday afternoon sessions to learn about exploring the various types of exhibitions in the museum. Learn how to view art with your children. Families will have an opportunity to make art in the galleries, with their own easels, inspired by the work in the exhibitions. Exploration and play will help bridge connections to the artwork and build literacy. Groups will be made up of 12 participant’s total. This is a family centered workshop and the only requirement is that all family members must make art! Parents will be encouraged to provide feedback during the pilot program at the museum that might contribute to the quality of our programming for families with in special situations.

Explore Contemporary Art: Duke Riley’s Those About to Die Salute You

Duke Riley’s *Those About to Die Salute You is the second installment of a multi-part residency that began with a recreation of a Romanesque bread and circus naval battle or naumachia that drew more than one thousand toga-clad spectators to a World’s Fair reflecting pool adjacent to the Queens Museum of Art on August 13, 2009.
